Ensuring sustainable development through strengthening the application of communication rights

Civil society organisations in the Global South strengthen the democratic participation of disadvantaged people and communities in society in order to advance sustainable development.

Local and grassroots initiatives raise awareness, contribute to social movements, and connect to larger networks to build long-term resilient movements at regional and global levels for systemic change.

Organisational goals

Network strengthening

Strengthening social movements so they are able to take part in policy making.

Increasing sustainability of knowledge and networks through regional clusters and movements.

Feeding local and regional perspectives to regional and global communication rights advocacy efforts.

Gaining a voice across countries and regions through stronger institutions and connections.

Network Strengthening

Strengthening the rights of organisations for access, voice and power to communicate their rights and entitlements.

Rooted in Christian faith, WACC works with all those denied the right to communicate because of their identity or gender.

Gaining access to address capacity of grassroots organisations to amplify and claim their rights and entitlements.

Reduced inequalities in access, ownership and control over media and communication rights.

Increased capacity, information and voice in all communication spaces, to digital, digital media, rights, linguistic diversity, and to promote media freedom, which includes advocacy and policy making.

More fair and balanced media reporting, especially of marginalised and vulnerable groups and communities.

Strengthening the application of communication rights to reduce inequalities in access, ownership and control over media and communication rights, including by marginalized communities in developing and developed nation.

Migrant, refugee and communication rights

Gender and communication rights

Communication rights and indigenous rights

Communication rights and climate change

Strategic thematic priorities

Grassroots Impact

Strengthening the application of communication rights to reduce inequalities in access, ownership and control over media and communication rights, including by marginalized communities in developing and developed nation.

Digital communication rights

Migrant, refugee and communication rights

Communication rights and indigenous rights

Gender and communication rights

Community solutions to the climate crisis.

Strengthening indigenous communication ecosystem.

Sensitive portrayal of refugees and representation and access to information and voice in all communication spaces.

Fair, balanced and gender-sensitive media portrayal of refugees and marginalized people, to participate meaningfully in decisions and policies that impact their lives and livelihoods.

Reduced inequalities in access, ownership and control over media and communication rights, which includes advocacy and policy making.

With its extensive networks - rooted in Christian faith, WACC works with all those denied the right to communicate because of their identity or gender.

Greater resilience of movements, and connect to larger networks to build long-term resilient movements at regional and global levels for systemic change.

WACC aims to strengthen a network of organisations for access, voice and power to communicate their rights and entitlements.

Fair, balanced and gender-sensitive media portrayal of refugees and marginalized people, to participate meaningfully in decisions and policies that impact their lives and livelihoods.

Reduced inequalities in access, ownership and control over media and communication rights, which includes advocacy and policy making.

More fair and balanced media reporting, especially of marginalised and vulnerable groups and communities.

Increased capacity, information and voice in all communication spaces, to digital, digital media, rights, linguistic diversity, and to promote media freedom, which includes advocacy and policy making.

More fair and balanced media reporting, especially of marginalised and vulnerable groups and communities.

Strengthening indigenous communication ecosystem.

Sensitive portrayal of refugees and representation and access to information and voice in all communication spaces.

Fair, balanced and gender-sensitive media portrayal of refugees and marginalized people, to participate meaningfully in decisions and policies that impact their lives and livelihoods.

Reduced inequalities in access, ownership and control over media and communication rights, which includes advocacy and policy making.

With its extensive networks - rooted in Christian faith, WACC works with all those denied the right to communicate because of their identity or gender.

Greater resilience of movements, and connect to larger networks to build long-term resilient movements at regional and global levels for systemic change.

WACC aims to strengthen a network of organisations for access, voice and power to communicate their rights and entitlements.

Fair, balanced and gender-sensitive media portrayal of refugees and marginalized people, to participate meaningfully in decisions and policies that impact their lives and livelihoods.